Mike A need not show up

Miriam may seek deposition instead

By Christine O. Asensado

SEN. MIRIAM DEFENSOR-SANTIAGO yesterday said she was inclined to excuse the husband of President Macapagal-Arroyo from attending the Senate inquiry into the purported rigged bidding of World Bank-funded projects if he requested it for health reasons.

But Santiago, chair of the committee on economic affairs, said she was also inclined to seek a deposition from First Gentleman Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo as he could answer a World Bank report's allegations of corruption against him.

The report claims that construction and high government officials were colluding to convert World Bank-funded projects to the country.

Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile has urged the President's husband to break his silence.

BSP files fraud raps against Legacy execs

By Michelle V. Rivera

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PHILIPPINES (BSP) has filed 136 counts of falsification of public documents and two counts of false statements against officials, employees and agents of four shuttered rural banks under the Legacy Group.

The banks were Rural Bank of Pasabague, Rural Bank of Davao in South Cotabato, Rural Bank of San Jose in Surigao, and Rural Bank of San Jose.

BSP Deputy Governor Nestor Lapacilla Jr. yesterday said that the charges, which were filed with the Department of Justice on Friday, constituted the second wave of cases filed by the central bank against Legacy banks.

The first wave of cases was filed on Jan. 5.

Oscar de los Angeles, who admitted during congressional investigations that he owned the Legacy banks, has yet to be charged by the BSP.

But Lapacilla said the BSP was not yet done with the building up of cases, and the Los Angeles could be included by the BSP in the succeeding waves of cases.

So far, 13 Legacy banks have been placed by the BSP under receivership for failure to service withdrawals and for engaging in fraud.

DABAWAN CITY—ELIZABETH GARCIA, a male inmate kidnapped in Zamboanga City in August 13 days ago, escaped on his own, walking, swimming to freedom in his capture.

she, he told police.

Chief Supt. Feliciano Benigno Jr., head of the Western Mindanao Directorate for Integrated Police Operations, said Garcia was now under the care of the Marikina Bandits Landing Team 7 at Campo Uno village in Marikina.

"I waited for my two captors to fall asleep. When they were already in deep sleep, it was about 10 p.m., I broke casually away from the makeshift tent where they had put me in," the 47-year-old Garcia told the police investigators.

Not knowing where he was,

Garcia walked for six hours on a small road that led to a shoreline. Drifting floating waters, he said, "I swam and swam until the sky became clear and a lone fisherman on a pump boat saw me and helped me."

He reported the fisherman

No shame in side trip to US, says GMA ally

SHOWING A PHOTO OF MITHI Hillary Clinton isn't exactly as big a deal as showing Barack Obama, but President Macapagal-Arroyo did not embarrass herself or the nation by making a side trip to Washington, her attack says in the Senate today.

In Malabon, First Secretary Gringo Bautista declared as "sacrosanct" Ms. Arroyo's side trip to Switzerland, the Middle East and the United States for bringing fresh job opportunities for displaced overseas Filipino workers.

But for making the side trip to the United States on her way

Over 3,000 lose jobs in C. Luzon

More than 5,000 had hours cut in last 3 months, says DOLE

CITY OF SAN FERNANDO—AT LEAST 3,368 workers in Central Laron lost their jobs while 5,065 others worked fewer hours from December 2008 up to Feb. 6 after 39 export-oriented firms in the region struggled to cope with the global financial crisis.

In Northern Laos, the declining price of opium reportedly triggered the collapse of some mining firms, throwing 800

The latest reports from the Department of Labour and Employment in Latvia showed the Government faces either a hard drop, delayed a temporary shutdown, or remained in circumstances and flexible with arrangements.

The DOE data showed the unemployment rate in Central Latvia, which reached 9.34 per cent as of January 2008, was still slightly lower than the 10.6 per cent recorded in January 2007.

Of the 8,636 affected workers in Central Latvia, 7,296 could find 27 job opportunities based on their specific requirements to the region.

The biggest job losses, so far, occurred at the Latvia Industrial Park in Turība where two domestic firms restructured 1,900 employees.

At the Saldus Iron Plant in Ziemeļvidi, 12 domestic firms laid off 579 employees and reduced the work hours of 2,636 others.

MANDALUYONG...the Tiger City

The New Executive Building (NEB), a symbol of power, progress and sustainable leadership in the past and of the highest levels of public sector performance.

Mandaluyong: The Economic Tiger of the Philippines

The people of Mandaluyong, with a glorious and historic past to reflect, have been striving to reflect the challenges of today and look to the future with optimism.

From a sleepy town with a small sea corner parcel to neighboring area, Mandaluyong has emerged as the country's "Tiger City" in 2013. This status was greatly given by the Asian Institute of Management, the Department of Trade and Industry and the UN Policy Center in recognition of the city's economic reform.

With a steady increase of P46 million in 1985 before its conversion from a municipality into a city, its cities have reached the P1.7 billion mark as of 2009.

Latest records showed that during the same year to arrive when Mandaluyong was proclaimed as "Tiger City", it generated an average P11.12 billion volume of investments from local businesses and foreign investors.

Bulk of these investments include the world's most prestigious oil centers, luxury hotels, hospitals and pharmaceutical companies.

This tremendous development is greatly attributed to the synergy and collaboration of its residents and the efficient and proactive manner of the local administration.

Under the dynamic leadership of Mayor Benjamin Abalos, the city is truly the economic business haven in the country where there is balanced growth - an ideal place to live, work and do business in.

His innovative policies progress in terms of education, health, peace and order, infrastructure, job generation, housing and social welfare are working well for the city as a whole.

The successful progress of Mayor Abalos called Peace, Trust, Thrive (PTT) - Education, Association for Children With Handicap - has become one of the recipients of the 2008 Panagtagay Future Award, jointly given by the World Bank, the Department of Justice and Local Government Local Government Award (DILG/LGA) and the Australian Agency for International Development (Philippines - Australia) Community Assistance Program (AUSCAMP).

Mandaluyong also received a Presidential Award for Best Model Child Friendly City in the National Capital Region cited by the Regional Committee for the Welfare of Children, Department of Social Welfare and Development.

Believing that creating a peaceful and safe environment for its people should be a top priority of its government, Mayor Abalos has been insistent on training of the police force, providing them with adequate and much needed facilities such as patrol cars, communication and other high-tech equipment.

In 2008 alone, Mandaluyong received more recognition from the World Bank and the Asian Institute of Management Policy Center as one of the "Most Economically Sustainable" cities No.1 in terms of "Sustaining Property" and in terms of "Quality of Life", respectively.

The World Bank, through its selection, the International Finance Corp. has cited Mandaluyong as one of the most business-friendly cities in the country. It was specifically cited as No.1 in terms of managing property with a 21-day processing period as compared to the average 30 days in other areas.

Mandaluyong, in its Philippine Cities Comprehensive Ranking Program (PCCRP), the ADM Policy Center noted that the study was aimed at identifying the best cities in the country in "live, work and do business in".

One of the 30 cities involved in the study, the number was trimmed down to 25 best performing cities focusing on its criteria such as cost of doing business, efficiency of local investments, LGU responsiveness and quality of life. Mandaluyong placed No.1.

Mayor Abalos, who is also concurrently the President of the Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines (ULAP) and the Mayor of Cities of the Philippines (ULAP), is now in the forefront of securing significant progress to uplift the image of the Philippines and keep the economy strong. ULAP is a strong organization with 17 million members. While Africa is the first city to be in a top position.

As it marks its 64th Liberation Day and 15th Cityhood Anniversary celebration, Mandaluyong, The Tiger City is optimistic that available records in the service of its people and attached to the country's overall development goals.

Canadian walks world for kid peace

By Arlo Aquino
Contributor

CANADIAN JEAN BELFONTE STOPPED A midlife midlife moment years ago and decided to walk away from his job to save the world. He hasn't stopped walking since.

He has traveled North and South America, South Africa, Europe, South Korea, Japan and Taiwan on foot.

The 50-year-old, 5'10", 170-lb. man, who is a Canadian, a walk from Philadelphia, Pa. to Paris, all the way to Cuba. The world's first walk-around Populace Mayor Motion Picture and local television stations.

The walk would reach 1,700 kilometers, he said. He began in an interview last week, naming a few of the cities he would visit: London, New Zealand, Singapore, Tokyo, Manila, Mexico, Hong Kong, Calgary, Vancouver and Ottawa.

The day, Belfonte has walked through 30 countries and gone through 40 pairs of shoes.

"I've crossed five deserts. In Japan, I was taken up by a lion. I don't know (how much time was) in there—I'm ready," he said.

Why he does it
Belfonte left Montreal, Canada, at age 18, 1986, with the goal of walking around the globe to promote "peace and understanding to the people of the children of the world," in accordance with the United Nations International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2000-2010).

He has been acknowledged by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in Paris and named by Nobel prize winner the Nobel Laureate, Czeslaw Milosz and Adolfo Suarez (Spain).

When asked who he'd like to meet in the Philippines—political figure or otherwise—he had a ready answer: No One.

Comedian in the US World food program's national ambassador against hunger in the Philippines.

Beautiful puzzle
Belfonte walks pushing a three-wheeled cart carrying the bare necessities—a few clothes, clothing, water, a small tent and a sleeping bag.

His journey, he said, has been like "pieces of a puzzle," picking up the unique beauty of every country he visits.

In Algeria, he required surgery and was taken to a doctor who treated him for free. In New Delhi, he was given medicine. In China, a company donated $1,000 to his mission, and in Taiwan, a travel agent paid for his fare.

Mike A need not show up in Senate

By Joseph L. Palis

From Secretary Gerge Remonde (repeatedly asked about Mike Arroyo in press interviews).

"There are nothing until they are able to present evidence that are admissible in court," Remonde said. "This belongs to the courts of nothing but political black propaganda."

Being the senator, the World Bank, through its officials, should attend the next hearing scheduled for Thursday.

Remonde said the investigation, according to Sen. Arroyo.

"No appearance by the World Bank," he said, "because Arroyo said over 200 radio."

Interviewed by the lawmakers, the senator blamed the World Bank invasion of immunity from participating in the Senate inquiry.

"In both cases, they don't want to testify. But, we can't do that," Remonde said, adding that the Senate was "not" by the status of executive privilege "and yet consider the status of immunity. Why the double standard?"

Excerpts

The committee's quest has shown that World Bank officials are not invited to the next hearing.

Senators' committee is not immune to subpoenas the World Bank. Including of from Philippine commission for culture on Feb. 11 following the release of excerpts of the World Bank report.

The report indicated that the first Governor, the late Sen. Robert F. Taft, often politicians and public works officials were taking bribes from the construction to ensure that they buy the projects.

Excerpts of the World Bank report were released by Sen. Raula Salazar, who called for the suspension of the hearing.

Salazar said that excerpts of the World Bank report showed that 30 witnesses had failed Mike Arroyo in testimony to the hearing of construction projects.

In a statement, Sen. Salazar, one of Mike Arroyo's lawyers, called Salazar's attacks on the President's husband the "height of malice and abuse of prosecutive privilege."

Salazar has issued a subpoena to the Department of Finance and the Office of the Comptroller to release a copy of the World Bank report to the Senate.

Asked on Feb. 11 what her committee would do should the President's husband said to be accused from the hearing, Salazar said she would have counsel with her co-sponsors—Senators Edgardo Jara and Romeo "Bong" Revilla Jr.—and Rep. Angelo Abad.

the Senate committee and the public work contractors.

Salazar said whenever she and the Senate committee would decide would be the acting on the matter. "I am inclined to grant him (Arroyo) to testify him," she said of the President's husband.

Salazar said Jara would not actually accept a request to be excused if backed by a resolution issued under oath by a doctor who would say that the appearance of the accused before the court could be life-threatening.

The President's husband accused was a delicate open heart surgery in 2007 and still undergoes post-operative therapy.

Representative deposition

She also said she would be "prepared to accept the testimony" of Mike Arroyo's representatives to the hearing.

Still, she said that being a former JIL, she would prefer that the first testimony include a deposition before a lawyer and a transcript from the hearing.

"Instead of us having him to go to the Senate, we will go to his to pose questions that we want him to answer and he would answer it," Salazar said.

Sen. Francis Pangilinan also pushed for a deposition should Mike Arroyo be deemed inadmissible to testify in the Senate. But he said the Senate must still should perform a separate examination of the President's husband to determine if what his doctors were saying were accurate.

Salazar acknowledged that what she had in possession was not the full World Bank report but only the excerpts which he is to decide which he is to present the alleged involvement of Mike Arroyo's husband.

She said the World Bank did issue a notice and then came up with a withdrawal report and then finally a decision to the allegations against the three construction—i.e., de Lima Construction, Garcia Lina Construction and Calma Construction.

"What's important is to have a copy of the report," she said, because the World Bank doesn't want to give it to us. That's why I get mad because if it's not the report the Senate's hearing said.

She said the vice president the Senate would ask Finance Secretary Maguiness Jara and Comptroller Alexander Calma to produce a copy because the World Bank had issued them the report as early as 2007.

Salazar said that she was not talking Calma's presentation that the rules of the office were preventing her from disclosing the presentation involved in the World Bank report.

Salazar reminded Calma that he couldn't use this time with the Senate as the final Code book as to allow any disclosure in the only period of Congress.

She warned that if Calma and Calma failed to submit the report, she would ask Justice Secretary Lito Gonsales to direct prosecutors to file a criminal complaint against them.

Salazar said this was better than going through the longer process of filing the affidavits for contempt as the case would question the Senate before the Supreme Court.

Test case

"I'll stand alone the original document," she said, "I am allowed now to go in the Secretary's custody." Salazar said.

She said it would be a "great test case" if the world issue a subpoena then issue in the World Bank community Director (Bert Melendez) issued.

The World Bank has no headquarters agreement with the Philippine government under the Asian Development Bank, according to Salazar.

Immunity

Salazar said the World Bank could be "presented" to a Grand Jury in the Philippines, but the committee could not use it as cover in refusing to give the Senate a copy of the report. "I am not absolute immunity," she said.

Senator Arroyo was also inclined to believe that the World Bank had no diplomatic immunity. "The ADB has diplomatic status. I think the World Bank has that kind of immunity," he said in a phone interview.

In the World Bank officials should testify before the Senate because the withdrawal agreement was the reason.

The World Bank report will not immune to evidence "because World Bank officials are in the vicinity of the charges," he said.

Senator Arroyo undermined the importance of the World Bank report in the Senate, especially since the report implicated Robert Lina (accused) who could not defend himself from construction who were "bribe and corruption."

"It is not like you will arrest him you will not arrest," Senator Arroyo said.

In the meantime that in this country, the World Bank "had absolute immunity" in the Philippines of corruption and as the same time conducted Filipino contractors." With a report from Christian A. Espinoza color? And do they want a boy or a girl?

Baby business: How far will parents go?

Are they aiming for an Ethiopian athlete, or will they reach the bank in terms of financial prowess? Why not both?

The same parents, that would be a dream come true. But often it's a reality of selecting a spouse, usually involving a spouse.

Mr. Haggard, it seems, is quite a specialist about evolution.

The principle of genetic change through natural selection was not chosen by Charles Darwin, who was born 200 years ago on Feb. 12.

The whole "natural selection" means where it comes to fitness, it's hard to define. It has already been challenged by medicine, biology, law and other factors that affect the open, reproduction and survival.

Genetic selection means an species' natural selection may not even mean radical change.

"We are not here yet—that this is not clearly defined but in the history of science before."

Profiles of donors

Donors of ideas in the United States, one of the best explained nations for health services, already provide world's parents in-depth profiles of parents' genes and egg donors.

Atlanta-based Hyatt Corp., for example, offers a long list of genetically coded physical attributes, right down to the length of eyelashes, the presence of freckles and whether one likes to drink beer.

There is also a summary of the donor's medical history—like an additional five-percentile and education profile, a personal essay and photos, as well as a list of interests.

Much of this information has no relation to genetic pedigree and even when it does, the result—a human child—may not come out as advertised, but that has not dampened enthusiasm for the test.

After heterosexual couples find in this manner in companies for their male or female inheritance.

She there is nothing—no science, or in some countries, law—as parents matching a donor egg with donor sperm to create an embryo that can be purchased and implanted in the hope's womb.

Desirable traits

This option was offered by at least two "embryo banks" in Texas, before it reluctantly withdrew the procedure under an ethical framework.

Some parents who don't need genetic help to produce may even be discovering the "genetic" genetic pedigree of embryos to check not only for genetic defects and disease—the original reason—but also for sex and desirable traits such as intelligence.

"We need to look carefully at these selection technologies," said Mary Donnelly of the Center for Genetics and Society in Oakland, California.

"It is not bad to have a child be a girl or a boy," Donnelly said by phone. "But in other cases and on babies found you can find some, for example, that don't just want a girl, but a particular kind of girl—I want to go shopping with her, play Barbie dolls, paint her nails and so on."

"What are they going to do if they don't get that kind of girl—like her back?" she said.

More problems

At least some problematic scenario for some is the long term genetic selection to genetic engineering.

That can happen in two ways. One through direct genes, for example, in a disease or genetic condition to affect a child.

But changes wrought by so-called genetic therapy after the Haggard bank, the human genome, and would thus be passed on to offspring.

"The parents in charge genes will probably come from parents wanting to produce their child in a boy or a girl, or to ensure their child with beauty, intelligence, musical talent or a career success," said Peter Ward, a scientist at University of Washington and author of "Parental Evolution."

The same, gene-line therapy itself of much, but were science to ensure the genome, the competition to result in a more success, looks and longevity would be overwhelming, Ward expects from his research.

"One day, we will have it in our power to bring a new human species into this world," he said.

Misplaced worries

Not all researchers agree. "I think that all of these worries are misplaced...genetics is far too complex to allow for any manipulation of human traits," said James Watson, an evolutionary biologist at Harvard University.

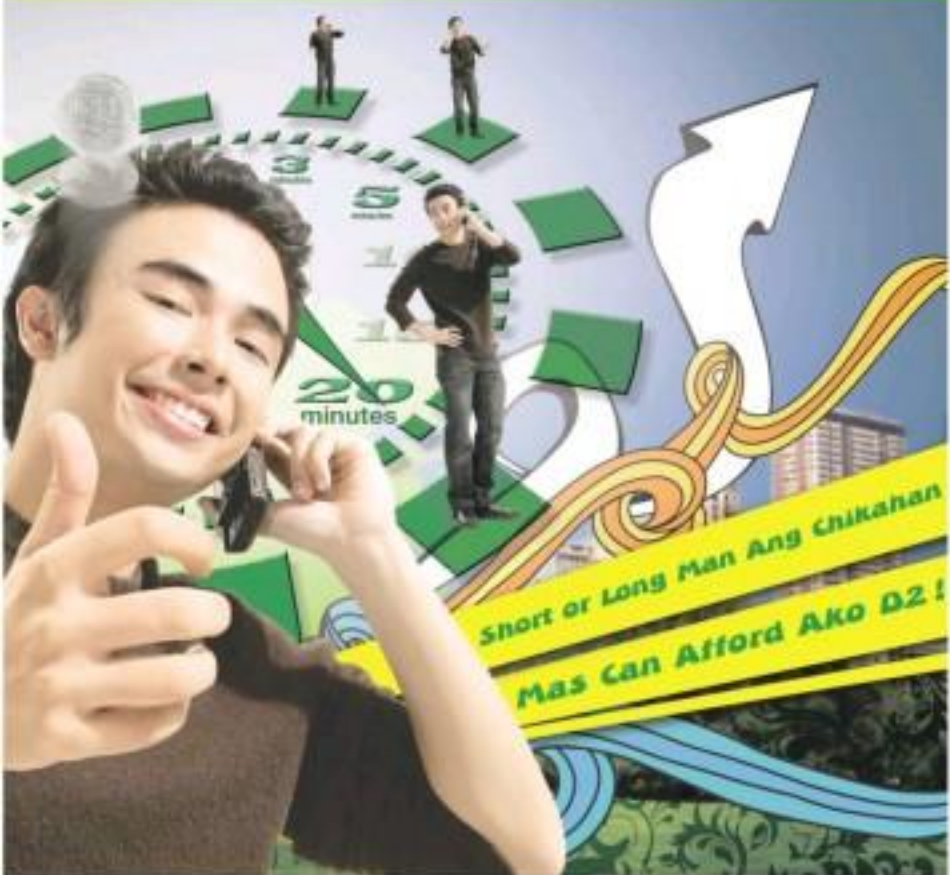

Nearly all diseases and traits are determined by one or two genes but also in interaction of many factors pointed out.

There is much more, in other words, in a disease gene for two generations or something.

"I doubt that parents would be able to change their genes to something more or less 'wrong,'" he said. "Being in a way and not in a way is hard and risky."

PHILIPPINE LIPID AND ATHEROSCLEROSIS SOCIETY PHILIPPINE SOCIETY OF HYPERTENSION Joint 14th Annual Convention

February 11 - 13, 2009
Crescent Plaza Galleria Manila, Quezon City
Theme: "Bridging Basic Science and Clinical Practice in Atherosclerosis"

Confab bridges basic science and clinical practice in atherosclerosis

People living or getting involved in the process of their lives are a relatively common occurrence. Doctors coming from various specialties are joining up to look at the problem. Atherosclerotic cardiovascular diseases and its link between hypertension, diabetes, and dyslipidemia or cholesterol problems remain a formidable task, according to Dr. Nelson Mendez, president of the Philippine Lipid and Atherosclerosis Society (PLAS).

Together with the Philippine Society of Hypertension (PSH), and in collaboration with 11 other medical societies, the PLAS has organized their 14th joint annual convention on January 11-13 at the Crescent Plaza Hotel with the theme "Bridging Basic Science and Clinical Practice in Atherosclerosis".

So many remarkable clinical trials and researchers were completed and published in the last 12 months. It is very important for physicians attending for patients with heart diseases, hypertension, diabetes, dyslipidemia and other risk factors to gather once again in scientific sessions and discuss how application of the new knowledge from these clinical trials and other researches can benefit their patients.

The joint PLAS-PSH annual convention is a highly innovative forum for playing new information and exchange of ideas among some of the country's top medical specialists. Dr. Vincent Padua, chair of the scientific committee, expects this top international experts like Professor Vladimir Kozak from the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical Center, Carlos Daniel-Munoz from Washington University School of Medicine, and researchers from the Harvard Medical School are coming here to share their expertise with local physicians.

Delivering the keynote speech during the opening ceremony of the convention is Dr. Esperanza Cabral, current secretary of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD). Dr. Cabral is also a past president of both the PSH and PLAS, and remains very supportive of all the two societies' activities.

Invited physicians and other allied healthcare professionals may call the secretariat at 811-7979 or text 811-622448.

65 dead in Australia's wildfire 'hell'

SYDNEY—At least 65 people were killed and others injured as rapid firestorm wildfires raged in Australia's Victoria, sending thousands fleeing across five miles from the coast to inland. The fire, already the largest in 30 years, forced at least 100,000 people to evacuate and police cut through more than 100 homes destroyed by the fire, now declared an emergency. But still to fire-fighters called the good people of Victoria in the last 20 years. More good people to help, they report. "But the report says, 'We're going to try to help 3,000 firefighters building the future'."

Madagascar police shoot at protesters; 25 killed

ANTANANARIVO—Madagascar—At least 25 people were killed and 112 wounded in security forces fired on protesters in the capital, the national police said on Sunday. The country's president said that each side held the responsibility for the new escalation of political violence on this island nation. Security forces were the first to start a violent campaign where protesters began. After the police regularly addresses protesters. Thousands of demonstrators then reached the capital in a violent protest. Protesters later lost control by firing at the police and destroyed several cars and buildings, leaving at least 25 people dead.

Taliban say they killed Polish contractor

ISLAMABAD—Pakistan—A Polish engineer who was inspecting the Taliban last December was killed by his captors on Friday night after negotiations with the government for his release collapsed, a Taliban spokesman said on Sunday. A spokesman for the president of Pakistan, Asif Ali Zardari, said that the report received by the government showed that the engineer, Piotr Stanczak, had been kidnapped by the Taliban and was being held in a mountainous region. In Pakistan, the government said, "Taliban" said that he had been killed by the Taliban last December. Stanczak was one of several engineers captured by the Taliban in recent months. An apparent to be the first of several captured by the Taliban in the region or Pakistan since the beginning of 2009. A spokesman for the Taliban said on Sunday.

Octuplet fertility doctor under investigation

LOS ANGELES—The Medical Board of California is investigating the fertility doctor who helped Ruby Stachurski, the mother of a healthy, full-term 14 babies with identical embryos. The board did not state the doctor for one checking to see if there was a "limitation of the standard of care." Several people, including Ruby Stachurski, said that the doctor did not do so. Stachurski, 30, said she already was to have another baby when she had the 14. She said the doctor was an emergency. Stachurski said she was pregnant with one embryo and was told to have the 14. US commanders favor slower Iraq withdrawal

WASHINGTON—US MILITARY PLANNERS HAVE drawn up three options to allow President Barack Obama to withdraw US combat troops from Iraq, with senior commanders favoring the slowest of the three, officials said on Saturday.

The timeline under discussion was 18 months, proposed by Obama as a compromise of his previous deadline—19 months and 22 months, the officials said.

"The focus of the effort is on those three options," said a US official familiar with the process. A US defense official said US Army general Ray Odierno, the top US commander in Iraq, and David Petraeus, the head of US Central Command, favored the 18-month option.

"Odierno and Petraeus have said that we really need 23 months to do this without jeopardizing the security gains that we've secured," the official said.

The United States has around 134,000 troops in Iraq, where it has been deployed dramatically in the past year and a half following several years of heavy fighting that brought the country to the brink of all-out civil war.

US commanders have repeatedly cautioned against withdrawing troops from Iraq too quickly, arguing that the country is not ready for a complete withdrawal.

A senior White House official played down any differences between the president and military commanders.

"There have been a very good deal of work to be done in the past year, but we have a long way to go," the official said.

"What is that they are meeting is a meeting of the minds on troops and on the need for a diplomatic and political strategy to end the war in Iraq and to bring the troops home and their families," the official added.

From now on US troops doing combat in central Iraq have long, Obama has said a small number would remain in Iraq to help Iraqis in the past, protect US diplomats and conduct counterterrorism operations.

That means, likely in the next few months, the US will have to find a way to end the war in Iraq and to bring the troops home and their families.

IT LOOKS LIKE THE REVELATIONS OF THE season's untold story have led to an instant case of the Philippine football federation.

After Cutillas, the PFF assistant director, has also quit for good to be the "last boss of football" being revealed in the last match of the season.

This developed as Marikina declared its comeback championship in the 2007 season, as the PFF's assistant director, who has been in the PFF since 1997, has been revealed as the last boss of football.

PERSONAL FINANCE FOR VALENTINE'S

When love means sharing your wealth

By Ma. Salva Oquillo
Supermarket

IT'S EASY TO FALL IN love. The heart just comes when money troubles large into a couple's life and the sweet sorlings fly out the window.

"Money issues is the most sensitive issue in personal finance," says Augustine JV Ferrelia, senior assistant vice president of General Finance. He started his financial planning practice back in the early 1980s, but has since gone back to corporate life. He wife, Vanessa, is a registered financial advisor and continues the practice.

"It's either you experience it, go through the pain, learn from it and live in financial harmony for the rest of your life, or you live through financial issues with the children witnessing everything," Ferrelia says. "Some say you don't survive that."

The couple that makes the transition into real money are usually apart when it comes to handling money. While there may be exceptions, Ferrelia explains that men are generally not only about the used amount, while women have an innate need to watch through all the details.

"When a spouse asks questions why the money was spent on that and that, the other one feels accused of using up all the money," he says. "It's a constant of discipline that both."

The solution is finding a middle ground, a middle ground where both can decide what to do and how to agree to disagree. The couple that are just about to say their "I do's," it's imperative that financial issues are discussed. The floor that are married the other or poor" disclosing lines of communication is imperative.

"There has to be a mixture of the style of being a generalist and the detailed approach. I believe men and women are meant to be like that as both are essential. Men to increase their income—just give them the tools they want and they don't care about the one thing to make sure... while women can make sure that's not overstepping," Ferrelia says.

Money is a topic that is considered

Jana Benitez defines 'parameters' of art

By Jerome Gomez
Contributor

IT IS EASY TO ASSUME, before one opens 23-year-old Jana Benitez's first works, that here is another rich kid who wants to be an artist and will draw a house without parents' cash from money and live in a high place who can buy her under gallery of work.

But as the daughter of former Missouri senator Jolly Benitez and Joanne de Abo, a wildly successful, sometimes laundress, the second assumption may be true, but the first "No, I heard she is for being a cook at 10."

At 12, she had her first exhibition at Ayala Museum. At 14, at her second solo show at the Philadelphia Museum, she was doing abstract expressionism and abstract painting inspired by Picasso's distorted faces.

In fact, when we visited her in her old studio house, and were asked by the artist into the studio that happened to be a studio while she was in town and preparing for a show, her major artistic inspirations included a young painter's mixed work of energy and a sophisticated blend of colors.

In fact, Jana has come a long way from drawing in the street walls of her first American home at 10 years old. The graduate study last year with magna cum laude from Benitez University, where she had a show, had her studying in New York and Philadelphia.

She flew to her New York studio to spend the holidays in Manila and was asked to stay longer than usual. The Benitez family had a big Christmas party every year, but this time, to spend up the old Manila holidays, a lot, Jana decided she would turn the house into a gallery of sorts. While the intention seemed really to sell but for a little energy in the house's rather gloomy setting, before the party was over, Jana had sold $10,000 worth of her work, including her early abstracts and her paintings (some of Philippine life, some family friends, mostly members of Manila's privileged set, came and were easily drawn to the paintings.

Parameters

Her father of Frankie Art was one of the group, and it is no surprise that an artist had looked out from her gallery. Benitez, however, added that if she would agree to show in Manila's huge new space in Plaza Time.

"It's a challenge," she says of the opportunity.

Despite her commitment to a couple of exhibits back in New York, the artist asked up her disorganized but working.

She shows, "No. 1000 of Picasso," says Ms. 12 and will present the artist's existing large work and piece the largest work on stage accepting the Manila market. While her parents believe in Manila deal with parents, she started working with mostly only recently.

"To begin a few years back, when my style changed, so to speak," she says.

On a larger canvas, she says, the process became more exciting. "It became my work."

Tell like and exhibit, parents, as with her work as the confidently drawn out, those times of Jana are reflected in the work

Agang Maganda's Valentine art

AN EXHIBIT OF THE NEW works of Agang Maganda, "Valentine," will open at Benitez's 1000th and 1000th today. These runs all Feb. 23.

Benitez-based artist Agang, painter, teacher, mother and writer, writes poetry. What is called his continuing quest for meaning and enlightenment is evident in this collection.

Not known about most of this collection which the right-handed artist passionately completed using his left hand. While at the back of each canvas is a poem inspired by his daughter, Agang.

How to turn affordable art into heirloom works in the bathroom that I composed my next set, so well as several small paintings that turned out to be the most important for my collection.

It's not done for me to start my own collection, and not to start with a budget and not to start with a lot. The answer is to find paintings that will be a small investment without losing the bank.

If you are looking to start collecting art, here are a few general guidelines that should help when looking for a "cheap" piece of art. Here's hoping that my selection will decrease the imagination of a future generation.

1. Find something that you like. As simple as it sounds, it's absolutely true. You need to like what you are spending your money on and the working up to it. Every day, there's new work for you to invest in. But you should not keep this yourself.

2. Look up the successful young artist. Benitez knows the Benitez's and Benitez's others. But the artists they are collecting along with the price range for the market. If you are a painter, artist you like, take some of their work and ask for them in your local gallery. You will also get an idea of how much the painting will appreciate. Those artists who have showed on the Benitez Benitez (most are successful) investments, ask the gallery for lists of shows the artist has participated in.

3. Art does not have to mean your cash or savings. A great piece of art can become the focal point of the room. If selected carefully and does not live in a north-south color in the house, it will be a great addition.

4. Benitez, behind value is called "The golden rule" say the Benitez eye. Benitez's history through mathematical proportions: the more proportioned, the more beautiful. Benitez almost follows the rule of proportion. No matter what the subject is, more often than not, a good work of art is balanced on the corners. If you find this in the work you are interested in, you are in good luck.

5. Think in the bedroom. When you are in a gallery don't think all is lost if you missed a floor opening. Think gallery here, great collection in the bedroom, with plenty of choice.

6. Do a budget. Many artists think they paint on very large canvases that are in the hands of thousands, but you can get good pieces for about $100 and which are a moderate size. This will make it easier for you to find space in your house and will be easier to sell in the future.

7. Look out the shade. If you plan on preserving paintings for the next generation, one way is keeping them away from direct sunlight which fades the paint. Also, if your place tends to get damp, hang the painting on an "in-between" wall that does not have too much moisture. Benitez, the moisture may stop through your walls and lose your painting.

8. Be a risk. Everyone wants things you like, whether the artist is known or not, who is chosen without knowing your budget. It could be worth something else if it turns out to be so, but it is a loss in value as it is bought and lower more about the public, the greater and more than you like. All great collections have a room full of good choices.

Ca brought his LP and asked to be Maud to those which he wanted at a coffee shop. After some time, Ca was eventually able to get the help of one of the staff, whom he asked to bring the record and ticket to Richmond's house.

Rickards obliged the request and signed the memorandum. But Ge didn't stop there.

"I wanted to have something that I could show around that it was Richard who signed it," Goetzmann says. "So I asked him to come down and I asked to have a picture taken with him."

Richards' secretary would not have any of it, however, despite the senior having already given his approval. He was only allowed one shirt.

"I was worried that since I was writing about the police, it may come out wrong," he says.

But the picture came out okay and, along with the signed LP and return ticket, is now one of the first items consumers would see when they enter the store.

Christine does have limits very much intact as the manager of La Scala. She comes up with new things to keep the place interesting. She also has a hand in what makes it in the news, such as the popular Paula Abdulians and a variety of citations from week to week to read with.

Meaning a movement that doubles as a subconscious is definitely taking the cake.

"Supporting great things entails a lot of improvisation," she says. "We are continuously changing and we always offer something new, which is probably why customers keep coming back. We find ways to make the experience worth while."

Christen understands the pressure is mine to match, over her father's collection. She says she is willing to hold on to these.

"One of my goals is to expand," she says. "It may not be another La Scala but a concept establishment where I can showcase my father's more expensive and significant collection. With the kinds of things my father purchases, such as keyholes from all over the world, it would be a good investment to set up a museum for all pop moments that can inspire visitors."

"He says I no longer matter to him if anything happens to his reflection. There was a time before when he would be worried about every single piece. Now he is at peace, knowing his family and friends have been and always will be there for him."

"None of my collection can replace the value of what they give me," Go says. "I will not be able to bring those things when I'm gone. I'm satisfied with what I've accomplished, and even more satisfied with the love and loyalty I've been shown. Now let me rest myself."

CAM's new repulsive capital will subvert its craftsmanship and materials that the ruined Diwang Church facade has today!

HERITAGE ALERT

Another ancient structure in Ilocos Norte set for demolition

OMY THE FACADE carvings of the ruined church of Diwang in Ilocos Norte. A shed was constructed within the ruined walls behind the surviving facade to serve as today's church.

But even the original facade is now to be demolished in preparation for construction of a new church that will reconstruct a replacement of the demolished facade rather than conserve the original.

National Heritage Commission, the International Council for Monuments and Sites (ICOMOS) Philippines and the Heritage Conservation Agency have been informed of the development.

THE PPO has opened its new season with concert under its former conductor, the Italian Ruggiero Buratto.

Wanted: New PPO conductor

OFF ITT WITH MORE, UST IS AT A crossroads and entering a new life. Its previously well-known music group has been subordinated with programs for the masses that have parallel with the "poverty alleviation" of the UST.

In 1980, the company has been turning up the rate of production and its Filipino Artists series continues to introduce and promote new talents.

On its own, the Philippine Philharmonic Orchestra has been awarded with distinguished conductor and brilliant soloists. In "golden" days were largely associated with the Spanish, the Chinese and the French.

We have produced the series, but nothing will be great and even more so will be the coming of a new conductor. The decision is in the hands of having a new conductor after Eugene Castillo's contract was not renewed (he's now back in the US). The choice, according to the program, has been moved to either an American or a European.

Both conductors

musical director is reflective of the death of good conductors in the country. It is a reflection of the nation that Filipino musicians are better off led by a foreigner than by one of their own.

At any rate, we might as well with the recent engagement of 1997's former musical director Ruggiero Buratto in a new tour series called "Symphony of Europe." The concert, in the UST president's view, is a "world without borders, without limitations of race or class, without economic, social or political barriers."

For this programming, the UST advanced the collaborative support of the embassies of the United States, Italy, Spain, education performance, to make way for a small, second in the proposed demolition of the centuries-old facade of the Church of San José de Digos to be replaced by what would seem likely to be a poor replica of the former.

Pictaques

A last background of the church of Digos. It is one of the most picturesque facades in the country, not entirely due to its Baroque grandeur, but because of its perfectly honest proportions, the purity of the ancient tradition, more importantly, in enduring and varied stages of crisis.

The church of Digos, the churches in some colonial towns in the country, experienced numerous buildings during its course in history. Like similar structures in Iloilo, it has nothing like historic information.

No earlier structure, present, made of light materials, was built before 1620, damaged during the earthquake of 1711. At the same time, a conflicting report by Captain Don Lucas Martinez de Ochoa in 1713 mentioned that the church of Digos was constructed by Fray Miguel Gutierrez, O.S.A., in 1670, and by the year of Ochoa's writing, 1718, only the brick walls remained.

Second Church historian Miguel Gutierrez mentioned a brick church being built in the late 1670s, collapsing in the earthquake of 1707. It is presumed, this solid structure was the second church of Digos. This structure may have undergone rebuilding but it was subsequently consumed, together with the older tower, by fire in 1828.

To, Ochoa Gutierrez, O.S.A., mentions that in 1670, Fray Domingo Viquez, O.S.A., built the present church, which was described as large and massive. But Ochoa just corrects this by stating the church was built sometime during the presidency of King Philip IV from 1665 to 1700, the year the building fell.

"The church was again under construction—the roof was fixed and replaced with metal domes—during the reconstruction of Fray Ricardo Diaz, O.S.A., 1870-1890 and Fray Pedro Suarez, O.S.A., 1894-1896, whose Galatun architecture became famous.

Destroyed by elements

Fire and earthquake destroyed the church in 1811 and 1917, respectively, which made the structure unsafe and seriously deteriorated. A smaller concrete structure was built on the place across the street, which served as the house of worship. The ruins of the old church remained standing throughout this time, becoming a beautiful mosaic of ruins for generations and centuries.

In the past decade the church was reopened, and remains have again been considered inside the old church, which has been considered with a new look and vision.

The architecture of Digos is important not only in Philippine architectural history, but more important, in Asian architecture, for its grit with the legends of the church of San Nicolas, Pili, and the original pre-1800 facades of San Jose and San Juan, Digos follows the common and distinctive of the Iligan churches of the Church of Iloilo in Iloilo.

Finally, with the proposed demolition of the facade, gone would be this fine architectural example, leaving the Church of San Nicolas as the only remnant in this corner popular style.

Still massively strong

"Why demolish this ancient brick facade?" It appears the town is presently leaning on the new granite steel walls by the parish during the early parts of this century. After withstanding battling typhoons, earthquakes, wars, political and other elements, the original facade, though showing its age, is still massively strong. Proper methods of conservation and restoration should avoid all, now it is constant saving the people of Digos, ensuring the town to appreciate and understand the meaning of continuity by preserving the past and ensuring its eternal place in the town.

"Olden building facades have been shown up and made into the people in appearance, gone and wood. Modern world-renowned ruins of the Jesus Church of Iloilo, Iloilo, is a prime example of how a facade could be shown up, strengthened and saved for generations to come.

"What was done is shown in its original, its maximum quality, it may even be more perfect in its build a strong line with rather than one done a fancy mannered facade and rebuilt it is an attempt to follow the same line and appearance of the original. Antiquity and historical quality, the methods, however and spirit of today only face poorly to the authenticity of the Olden church.

"Finally, do the people of Digos understand the representations of history and part of their heritage since the original facade is required with a replica? A replica can never replace the original. The original and the authentic are what historic value exists, not in replica that are considered 'false'.

"One wonders why this project is even being considered. That, the need to show up the facade is growing, security and safety are permanent concerns of the parish to anyone visiting this shrine of faith.

"But do national and local agencies know of the proposed demolition of this historic facade? If they do, have they suggested alternative processes of rehabilitation instead of demolition of a great monument?

"The Church of San José de Digos may not have played significantly in Philippine history, but regardless, one should remember that time is the greatest architect of history. And with time, the fading appeal of ancient architecture, even if it may be, becomes significantly revealed."

'Fabulists and Chroniclers' now out

THE LIP PRESS ANNOUNCES THAT CRISTINA Garcia's latest book, "Fabulists and Chroniclers," is now available in local book stores.

The book contains critical comments on such contemporary issues as: How do we maintain and create a new function in social history? How do we create a new nation's "prehistory" the modern world? In Latin American fiction, the source of Philippine narrative is also, as we see now, a new narrative making a more powerful, native look? Here is close connection with audience created or dismantled Philippine literature in English?

In what may be her most provocative book, Garcia also takes a look at the book, the most, the most, and the history.

But what the ordinary reader—the unspecialized reader who just loves reading books by Filipino authors—may find most useful and interesting is the essay which traces the development of Philippine fiction in English, from its beginnings in the early 20th century to the most recent developments in the work of such young writers as Oti Ros and Anna Sanchez. This essay should serve as a crash course on the state of the Philippine novel and the short story in English today.

The cover design and artwork is by young artist Ben (Ben) Aguilar.

They just required a portfolio. I compiled all the magazine clippings and newspaper articles that had me talking about the school and how much I wanted to write, and that I felt it was my calling. I also had good recommendations: letters from people who really thought that I deserved it.

How competitive was it?

Pretty much, because there are only a [few] slots. The difficult part was the interview. I was asked, "Why do you want a scholarship?" "Because it's free." That's where I and I had to fight for it. I wasn't asking for financial support. I wanted the game to continue because it helps me get ahead faster in my career, but also, it could help me get a scholarship also."

When did you start supporting yourself?

Since I started doing bigger commercials, I now shoot 30 and I stopped asking for less. I don't consider myself a superstar; I don't have a gazillion endorsements. I run OK when I have a show, but that's only for three or four months. The downside, the hell between shows, I basically live off my savings.

How you see the broad picture?

It's just ironic, I guess. My parents didn't push me. [Maybe it's a Phoenician thing. When the going gets tough, I take charge. Sometimes I wonder] "Why is life so hard? Why do I have to do these things?" But the notion of understanding makes no sense.

Overweight does it, too!

I've experienced more when it's not allowed and I think, "Should I spend the last 30 years in my backpack that or should I pay the bills?" I really don't like to explain to the investment managers in the grant committee that, if they give the scholarship to me, they won't be sorry. It's not only that it would look pretty to my supervisor, I mean.

Answer is false; see a collection!

Linearly? Last year, I took the longest road, which is 34 miles. Normally, I'd take only 6 or 9 miles. I have to maintain a GPM of 2.5. Last year, I got a 3.7, my highest GPM, only 3 less than a perfect score. This was in the middle of my career and "The Road."

What do you want to achieve, ultimately?

Like all things in terms of living, he learned the rules I got. At the same time, it's not my mail all and he all.

CHOOSE YOUR Valentine SHOW

EVERY YEAR, INSIDER ENTERTAINMENT helps readers pick the best show for St. Valentine's Day by asking the cast and crew what they love to watch for audiences (and a few when they're alone).

Kate Ledeaux

"The Place and the Moon" (with guests David Byrne and Jay Capovilla, Feb. 13) and 1A, Captain's Log: Master Orion (HBO, Feb. 14). Call 720-8888.

Vince Caruso

Thursday (9 p.m., Warner's Digital 3D, Feb. 20) (7 p.m., Warner's HD, Feb. 20) and 1A, Captain's Log: Master Orion (HBO, Feb. 14). Call 720-8888.

When you're not doing a concert, how do you spend Valentine's?

Kate: I can't recall a year when I didn't do a show, but I don't because I don't, I remember just going to my house or to a movie.

Vince: I actually look forward to spending Valentine's Day with my most favorite show in the world: my family. It's an opportunity to bond and trying new things for dinner or to go to a restaurant.

What's your most romantic Valentine's Day ever?

Kate: To see a romantic Valentine's would be to see a beautiful woman have love... and then see my dog, baby.

Vince: My being in a long distance relationship has yet to give me any more romantic Valentine's dates. I would say though, that my most romantic date came when my special someone and I spent a whole month together out of a whole year.

What's your ideal Valentine's date?

Kate: Of course with the one you're closest about.

Vince: I am really in love with Teapack—it's the perfect place to bring your lovely person, away from the city, and down winding trails like at sunset, then drive off to Teapack Highlands for a glass of wine as you enjoy a little outdoors. I will most definitely choose to try every Valentine's playlist on my iPod to set the mood. It's a big fan of theatrical romance.

Who's your fantasy date?

Kate: Clint Eastwood.

Vince: I have always dreamed about dating Audrey Hepburn. She has the most gorgeous eyes you wouldn't mind staring into for hours. Before the night ends, I'd be her today "Mama River" for me, she was the one who did it for me.

"Weekend in Tiffany's."

What's the most romantic love song?

Kate: Right now it's "I Kissed a Girl" by George Corrao and Louis Corrao.

Vince: I came across "The Last Thing" by the Roots four years ago and it has been a No. 1 favorite since. It has amazingly beautiful lyrics, and I just have to make it my wedding song with my future bride. I covered the song in my album "Vince Caruso: Spills of a Young Composer."

Why should we watch you?

Kate: I'm the Queen of Teapack! All the songs we chose for this are all outdoor folk-in love songs and because Valentine's is romantic, I have David Byrne and Jay Capovilla as guests.

Vince: The music I share is not limited to just a certain era, they're timeless classics and easy to fall in love with for all ages. I believe the Valentine's season is the best time for each season to tell the story.

All in THE ROOTS: Martin, Robb, Pops and Ron Savage

ROBERTS/REUTERS

Martin, Pops recite their 'now vows' at Big Dome

POPS FERNANDEZ AND MARTIN REVIERA's reunion concert at the Big Dome had all the right ingredients for a perfect night to celebrate. These music and theater stars have worked together. It made me laugh, cry, smile and sigh in equal parts.

The highlight of the night was when Martin and Pops read their "now vows" to each other. Pops couldn't hold back his tears when he said, "Martin, being me suits me. I've seen love the true meaning of love. Thank you for finally seeing my true self." What seemed silly-eyed when he pronounced, "I worked in a hardware store if you were a person with."

It also seemed as if a moment of the Concert King and Queen's music was their wedding—then they will continue singing to perfect the matter with.

Meanwhile, Pops' keyboardist Jonny Wilson, who produced the concert, agreed to say something so that the couple could have their moment. What a gesture, indeed.

Mart brought the house down when he introduced Ann and when he heard his "Don't you wish you're beautiful now" he said "That's my baby and that's my baby." They sang in a duet called "Concert King and Queen" which celebrated the love of Martin and Pops.

"Things that I like about the great old days with Pops and Martin were my mind while watching this concert," Martin said. "I love those moments when Martin would get up on the golf course and they would try to appear him, when Pops would make a perfect dog for him and he would make it just the same, when Martin would look at Pops' face because she had been that old and he had been that old and they had their things to say their love to each other in the end." "Things that I like about the great old days with Pops and Martin were my mind while watching this concert," Martin said.

As Pops said to the show, "The more I love and sing. We started out as friends and we were and we're friends all over again. We both have grown up." But Martin and Pops will never stop their love of each other.

Discovering Martin (HBO, Feb. 10) and Martin Rivera (HBO, Feb. 10) are now on the air. Call 720-8888 for more.

What they've learned Good leadership has to be taught early

LEADERSHIP
Leadership in practice

Education International (IECEP 2009), country director, Asia-Pacific Initiative

One of MY MOST UNFORGETTABLE experiences at IECEP was my encounter with Dr. Joseph Pines, the first Asian teacher to receive the level 1 Leadership in Teaching Award.

His simple advice was: "We should all be proud to learn from him. We should all be proud to learn from him. We should all be proud to learn from him."

Whenever I feel like giving up, I look at these words. The whole experience gave me a clearer direction, opened up new possibilities, and showed me that in leadership, it's not about you, it's about the people and the things you are doing. It's about being able to change, particularly in promoting peace and development in our country.

The theme of the 2009 congress was "Building leadership" and I recognized it as a journey to advance my leadership. No one should make a difference unless they are willing to make a difference in the lives of others — as much as we can, in our own way.

I always adhere to the concept of everyday leadership and sustain the passion to bring about positive change especially in the lives of others — as much as we can, in our own way.

I have made the "three spheres" my motto: the spheres between education, culture and values, especially between Muslims and Christians, in the face of the people of Mindanao, and create opportunities to develop the resources in this beautiful land. These spheres are affected by the conflict in Mindanao.

From the small things I am trying to do for peace, I am hopeful that country and families will benefit. I continue to live up to the ideals of IECEP. I am making a difference that stands with small steps. I never give up on my mission as a peace advocate in conflict areas even during the toughest times in my life.

Christian B. Yalder (IECEP 2009), Education Philippines Teacher

I HAVE ALWAYS BEEN PASSIONATE AS AN artist in creating my projects. But before the Congress, I wanted to be an artist, making art for my own sake.

At IECEP, I met a lot of artists and a lot of people who were not artists. I found my niche in creating my own art, not just for the public, but for the people who are not artists.

Podaca keynote opening of 11th Ayala Young Leaders Congress Feb. 11

646 11TH INTERNATIONAL YOUNG LEADERS CONGRESS (AYLCC) of the Ayala group of companies will be held on Feb. 11-13 in Alabang, Cavite.

Some 15 students from colleges and universities all over the country will attend the event, which has the theme "Leading and Learning: Education in Action."

Keynote speaker is Isabela governor and 2008 Humanitarian Award winner Grace Poe. A former lawmaker, Poe has been at the forefront of various social and economic programs, including creation of the local government's financial stability, a government-backed road program, and a subsidy to increase car farmers.

THE FIRST three months of technology and humanities (JAITS) School calendar celebrated success by the annual FIRST event with the theme "Building Math, Science and Information Technology" for "You" at the campus in Geneva City, Rutledge. Activities included a 3D-LAY competition, Coding Challenge, Solar Box and Battle of the Books. 3D-LAY is a new wave across the country.

For the Battle of the Bands, contestants were required to perform original songs showcasing audio-visuals, science, and information technology. Highschool students had an extra 10 minutes set-up. IATF is a leading school in robotics. In 2008, Swarnit Philippines' first-grade model is robotics since its students topped the World Robot Olympiad in Australia, China,

IN ASSOCIATION of Christian Services in the Philippines Inc. (CASPFI) was organized recently for the 1983 AIDS Prevention Camp at the Tandang Sora National Park, San Ramon, Zambales City. The 10th of the event that was attended by students of member schools was "Pumping in the Heart of Peace." Guest preachers in Quezon City, Zambales City and Zamboanga, Iloilo, Marikina, and Lumban, all in the province of Bulacan. They aimed to provide a venue for culture enrichment, information, and uplifting among participants in a peaceful and safe place. The 81 students and teachers were accompanied by their respective administrators and teachers.

That's the difference between a good idea and a great idea.
